I am currently going into my 5th year at the University of Edinburgh where I am studying MEarthSci Geology & Physical Geology. My fieldwork experience includes Inchnadamph, the Tabernas and Sorbas basins in SE Spain and Cyprus where I carried out mapping exercises and explored the geology and geomorphology in all three locations. I volunteer 1 morning a week at the British Geological Survey in Edinburgh where I am currently involved in digitising their hand specimen collection. I enjoy all aspects of geology however my main interests are in petroleum geology and sedimentology. I recently completed my 4th year dissertation titled 'Investigating the effects of faults in reservoirs on the storage of oil through an analogue experiment at Lamberton, Scottish Borders'. I also enjoy hillwalking, cycling and photography which all allow me to explore the fantastic geology Scotland has to offer.
